What's new in Horse Paradise - Pegasus Expansion Pack:

Ex-Employers I started working for the state of Nevada as a paralegal in 1977. At that time there was hardly an actual paralegal in the State, more a secretary within a field office. I was trained as a paralegal through a one year program within the state and in a paralegal program at a local community college. At the time I entered the field there were only 26 positions for paralegals, mostly filled by secretaries or managing several paralegals. My job was to absorb the legal research of the field office I worked in, then print it out to lawyers for review. Many years later, after twenty-seven years in the field, I took a year off and tried the world of law firms. I could not find any work, all stating that I was under qualified. I contacted the State and told them I had been trained to work as a paralegal. Was told to apply for an entry level secretary or clerical position. Again I was told I was overqualified for entry level. At this point a new position for paralegals had opened. I went directly from the clerical position to the paralegal position and from there I worked my way up to an office manager position. All my work was directly under the point person for the office. When some of the senior staff retired I was promoted to acting head of the department. One day my boss called the State's placement service to see if they had any entry level positions. There were none, I was the first one to be employed as a paralegal since the program was made up of secretaries. I got a call informing me of the same story I had heard before. I wanted to know if they were going to declare me overqualified again and if that would keep me off the list of qualified candidates for a new opening. I explained the situation already, with the exception of the story of how I got my job in the first place. I ended up being offered another clerical position in the same office. When one of the new hires in my office returned from training he remarked that there were about three times more jobs for paralegals. It was then I began to notice the names of every paralegal made up on the job boards. It was then I realized what had happened, the 'Department of the Bureau of Audits' had hired any employee that answered the phone rather than a paralegal. I had been

This is an homage to the good old days of the 90's when puzzle games looked good.
