persists at record-high levels, with more than half of the furloughed federal workers reporting that their wages, salaries, or job benefits were negatively impacted due to the shutdown, according to a new report released by the National Employment Law Project (NELP) and the National Council of La Raza. The report details how, for many workers, the direct effects of a government shutdown are now manifesting in new ways: There is increasingly scarce access to a reliable paycheck to cover basic needs; bills are piling up as paychecks shrink; and families and individuals are not able to make ends meet because their wages have dried up and are likely to remain so for weeks or months. "Congress needs to end the shutdown and pass needed legislation that will get back to work," said NELP Executive Director

Congress must promptly pass legislation to restore pay for federal workers, fully fund food assistance programs, pass new relief legislation for the millions of Americans who have been forced to shut their businesses, and pass new

Here is the fiddle var l = { eventList: [[1,2,3], [4,5,6], [7,8,9]] } l.eventList.forEach(function (a, i) { console.log('Loop is working'); }) A: From the documentation: forEach(callback, thisArg [, returnThis]) Meaning that callback is supposed to be a function, not an arrow-function that returns a new callback. If you wanted to forEach array-like, you should use a callback from Array.prototype.forEach.
